

3 STEPS TO CHANGE THE WAY YOU LOOK AT ART

SEE

What do you recognize?
What do you notice?

THINK

What does this make you think of?

What do you see that makes you say that?

CONNECT

How does it connect to you and your world?

How might this relate to a larger idea?

FLOOR 1

Antonius-Tin Bui cuts paper into detailed pictures. This careful cutting helps them create space for stories that aren't often told. They like to use paper because each piece holds special memories.

WHAT IS AN ACTIVITY THAT HELPS YOU THINK OR FEEL CALM?

☐ FOUND IT!

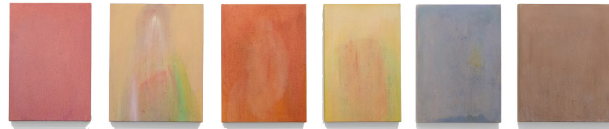

Artist Andrea Carlson's paintings remember the events of Oct 15, 1900, when the Cheboigaming Band's village was burned in Northern Michigan. This particular painting depicts Burt Lake, a site where Anishinaabe would bury caches of supplies for future visitors.

WHAT SPECIAL THINGS DO YOU WANT TO LEAVE FOR PEOPLE IN THE FUTURE?

FLOOR 2

Each of these paintings by artist Manika Nagare is based on the color palettes used by other Japanese women artists Nagare has discovered in the collections of Japanese museums.

IF AN ARTIST CHOSE A COLOR PALETTE TO REPRESENT YOUR LIFE, WHAT WOULD THE COLORS BE?

☐ FOUND IT!

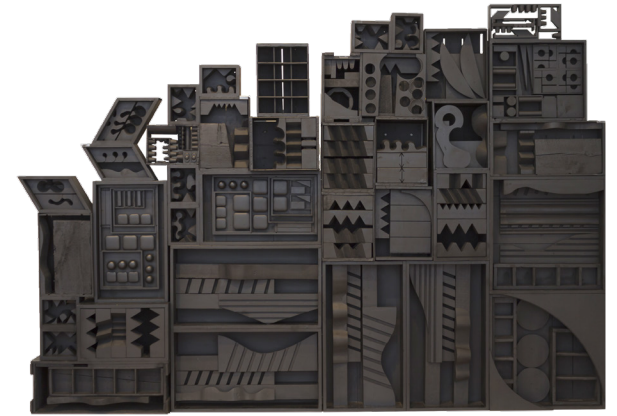

Artist Frederick Ebenezer Okai, who lives in Ghana, makes giant clay pots with the help of his friends and community. The pots are so big they have to build special ovens to fit them inside.

WHO WOULD YOU ASK TO HELP YOU MAKE A BIG ARTWORK?

☐ FOUND IT!

MEZZANINE

Louise Nevelson was an American sculptor known for her big, monochrome wooden sculptures. She grew up near a lumber yard and moved to NYC, where she collected objects around the city, painting and arranging them into her art.
